"C:\Program Files\MySQL\MySQL Server 5.5\bin\mysql" -h XXXXXXXXXXXX -u aa -p a is a valid username and XXXXXXXXXXXX are the correct ip and port for the MySQL database. It works fine for that database. Now I want to create a second database using this command. "C:\Program Files\MySQL\MySQL Server 5.5\bin\mysql" -h XXXXXXXXXXXX -u aa -p So I tried to change the -p in the above command from the second database. But it does not work. Any ideas? A: You can use the mysqldump command to create a dump file of a mysql database, save it on your system, and then copy the dump file to a target server. After you do so, you can then restore the dump file to another server. Look at the manual for how to do this. As it announced a couple of weeks ago at CES, Sony has launched the first smartphone to use its Project Glass headset. The prototype, which is basically an augmented reality headset that lets you surf the web and make phone calls without taking it off, won't be available in the market until sometime next year. But Sony has actually sold two official units for CES attendees, and you can find photos of them below. In order to make the headset a reality, Sony basically needed a way to harness data from its existing devices. That's why the company has already figured out how to synchronize the data from the sensor on a PlayStation Eye camera. As a result, the Sony Project Glass headset can gather data from a social network profile, add text and visual information, and can even let you control the camera on your PlayStation Eye.
