A physics-based horror experience inspired by the eerie, original short story of the same name by indie developer Andrew Plotkin. Created in collaboration with composer Jared Emerson-Johnson, the soundtrack features original music and sound design by Jared and Andrew, as well as The Doppelganger and Kingdom Death: Monster creators, Ron Carmel and Jack Wall. A chilling, horror experience that challenges players' perception of reality and reality itself. Splice features 14 unique locations, multiple endings and a variety of disturbing interactive objects that can do harm to the player. Make your decisions carefully! System Requirements: Minimum: OS: Windows 7 Processor: 2.0 GHz or higher Memory: 2 GB RAM Graphics: GeForce 610M or AMD HD5000 or higher DirectX: Version 11 Hard Drive: 2 GB Recommended: OS: Windows 7 Processor: Intel Core 2 Quad 3.0 GHz Memory: 4 GB RAM Graphics: GeForce GTX 780 or AMD Radeon HD 7850 DirectX: Version 11 Hard Drive: 4 GB Content on this page comes directly from press releases and fact sheets provided by publishers and developers and was not written by the Game Revolution staff.Q: How to find "work" (motion across distance) out of a string in XNA? I have a string of integers, e.g. "42 52 76". They represent positions on a (x, y) screen. I know exactly what the numbers represent (I'm literally using an emulator), but I'm still a bit confused about using strings. How can I transform this string into motion across space? I need to take the numbers I've got, read them off the screen (each is a single point), and then be able to say, "Move (point) across screen, outputting that point, every 100 pixels" or something like that, for me to then take that into the rendering engine and have all sorts of other XNA-ish things happen. I don't want to do it literally with the string, though (not yet). A: This answer has now moved to this question, but I still believe my original answer is still valid in terms of how it solves the original problem, so I've moved it as a cross-post. I don't believe there's a way to do what you want in XNA that doesn't involve you creating a class to represent screen coordinates. So the first

I am Cédric and I've been working on 'Smart Fart' for 4 years. In this blog post I'll go through my game development history. Before publishing a game that people already played over and over again, it is really important for me to tell you the whole story behind the game. A game story is really important to me. This is why I made a lot of short, free 'Choose Your Own Adventure' video, and a book. They're great to tell a game's story. When I was writing 'Smart Fart' story, I was considering an RPG Maker games. I did not go with it at the time as I was focusing on 'Rouge Devil' which is an open world 2D action-adventure game, but that game has got so big and the game engine is so powerful that I'm now considering to port it to mobile with Unity and start working on 'Rouge Devil 2' with my free time. A post about the RPG Maker. So why a strategy game? I had planned to make a game that would be a mix of strategy and shooter. I thought I was pretty good at strategy but I realized that there's a lot I need to learn, so I decided to put all my spare time into my strategy game. I wanted it to be a fast paced, action game. A good strategy game for a beginner. A post about strategy games. I was writing a funny manual and a short trailer before starting the development and I received a lot of tips and advices from those two. A movie of the first prototypes. The main idea of the game is that you have a warehouse with lots of clients that need delivery of their packages. You have to be efficient with your resources. Efficiency is really important in this game. Resources are limited, which means you have to manage your workers. If you don't get rid of the workers who fart more, they'll reduce your rate. To make the game accessible for beginners, I wrote a tutorial with lots of level difficulty. I designed all the levels and the end-game. I planned all the challenges and obstacles that the player has to face. I spent a lot of time on those levels. I made a small article with 5 tips to improve your strategy games. Another movie of the first prototypes. Another movie of the first prototypes. There's also a mission mode

Preoperative renal functional evaluation prior to surgery for prostate cancer: is it helpful to guide surgery selection? Theoretically, it is anticipated that the preoperative evaluation of renal function could be helpful in selecting treatment. We conducted a review of open and laparoscopic radical prostatectomy in order to determine whether there was any benefit of this information. We reviewed all open and laparoscopic radical prostatectomy patients in our database from March 1990 to December 1997. We measured the preoperative serum creatinine, and if increased, performed a renal scan or estimating glomerular filtration rate (eGFR) to determine the baseline. Using a quartile system, we computed each patient's baseline renal function status, and compared the different techniques (open and laparoscopic). Initially, the entire cohort was limited to patients with a baseline eGFR >60 mL/min. Using the same set of patients, two more cohorts were selected based on differing baseline eGFR values. The first cohort included all patients with a baseline eGFR >60 mL/min, and the second cohort, patients with baseline eGFR 1.7 mg/dL were at a statistically significant, greater risk for morbidity, including blood transfusion, urinary incontinence and prolonged postoperative ileus. Patients with functional impairment, by virtue of their baseline eGFR, in the cohort with baseline eGFR > 60 mL/min, had an increased risk of morbidity. Patients who were included in the cohort with baseline eGFR >60 mL/min and had both Forged in the fires of the fantasy realm, Fantasy Hero Manager is a FREE MMORPG with two game modes: Adventure and Quest. In Adventure mode you will fly over the world (maps generated randomly) in search of your adventure, recruit friends to fight the monsters or help you in the next quest. In Quest mode you will fight through a succession of dungeons, collecting treasure and ultimately finding the Fountains of Eternal Youth. Fantasy Hero Manager is a highly addictive and intuitive game, the perfect side-project to keep you busy when your day job is done. The game is designed to be highly accessible while also being broadly complicated. You will be trained on how to manage your hero's personalities and the motivations of each hero in the game, letting you make the right decision when to give them a pay-rise, or the sack! The game features a rather large and detailed map of the world, however, you will still be able to enjoy the game despite not knowing every single detail of the world. For help and support, you will need to purchase food (using a crafting pot), water, potions and the ability to buy, learn and manage your heroes then take them on an adventure in a randomly generated world, where the heroes, monsters and events will change every day! Simply put: Fantasy Hero Manager is a game where your fate rests in your hands. For a limited period, it will be available free of charge on Steam. It is made in Unreal Engine 4, but runs with minimal of power, and has no subscription fee or time limit. The game is designed to be friendly to non-gamers: the game UI uses easily familiar navigation and design patterns, similar to the mechanics of typical adventure games such as Dungeon Master and The Bard's Tale. This approach makes the game accessible to a larger audience, and really cuts down on the learning curve. The game can be read through easily, providing a tutorial experience with little to no work. All known issues have been addressed, but nobody's perfect. Having a system that allows easy adoption without too much learning is one of the biggest strengths of the game. While the game is made using Unreal Engine, it is not dependent on Unreal Engine to operate. All game mechanics are heavily independent of the framework, and can be modified or expanded upon with minimal effort.
